Through this programme, all the participants will have access to up-to-date coaching information and best practices. This will increase the number of certified coaches and enhance the quality of the existing ones. For this specific programme, FINA has partnered with the renowned the Institute of Swimming in Great Britain.

They hope to reach more than 10,000 users by the end of 2020, with a particular emphasis on underdeveloped countries. The Institute of Swimming has provided e-content and resources for the courses and Swim England Coaching Certificates will also be FINA endorsed.

Becky Cox, Institute of Swimming's managing director, said: "We're delighted to be working in partnership with FINA. Seeing our high-quality courses being delivered around the world further validates our position as leading in aquatics training for both teachers and coaches.

"We're proud of the standards we set and the fact that such a well-respected organisation such as FINA has called on the Institute of Swimming to help develop this certification speaks volumes about the existing courses we offer to swimming coaches in the UK."

A spokesperson for FINA said: "For this specific programme, FINA has partnered with the renowned Institute of Swimming. Through this programme, all the participants will have access to up-to-date coaching information and best practices. This will increase the number of certified coaches and enhance the quality of the existing ones."
